

BIG MAURETANIA SEA'S PLAYTHING IN BLACK SQUALL

Seas Sweep Upper Deck of Ocean Giant and Smash Boats.

STORMY ALL THE WAY.

Cunarder Brings Ambassador Reid, $4,000,000 Gold and Heavy Mail.

The giant Cunarder Mauretania, sailed at noon to-day after a stormy passage. She left Queenstown Sunday at 10.50 A. M. and encountered rough weather all the way.

At 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon a black squall came up following a calm, and knocked the sea flat. The barometer went down to 29.20. At the end of two hours the waves began to batter the Mauretania, and swept over her forward for three hours, the spray rising to the top of the tall funnels.

A big wave struck the ship on the starboard side, washing over her main deck, the water pouring down the hatch-ways into the stowage. The waves rose as high as the upper deck. Three life-boats on the starboard side were lifted from their fastenings and hurled with such force that the planking of one was skewed, ruining it, and the others were badly damaged.

Aside from this the ship suffered no damage and no great inconvenience, except in the delay caused by the rough weather.

The Mauretania brought 400 first-class passengers, 31 second cabin and 66 steerage. Her Christmas mail was heavy. There were 2,077 sacks of first-class mail and 110 of parcel post packages. In her strong room she brought $4,000,000 in gold.

Among her first-class passengers were many notables, including Ambassador Reid and family. The Ambassador comes to America on a sixty days leave of absence, beginning Jan. 1.

Ambassador Reid hurried over to attend a meeting of the Board of Regents of the State of New York in Albany to-morrow. About New Year's he expects to go to Washington to confer with the President, but said his trip to Washington had no particular importance. He said he might be called back to London before his sixty days were up to attend to official business, but hoped he could remain here until March.

Mrs. Reid and the other members of the family will remain longer. With the Ambassador party was Mrs.
Ridgely Carter, wife of the First Secretary of the London Legation.

Aboard the Mauretania also was a party of English financiers accompanying John W. de Kay, president of the Mexican National Packing Company.

Another passenger was Lady Duff Gordon, wife of Cosmo Gordon, who comes to visit her sister, Mrs.
Lynn. She was met at the pier by Elsie de Wolfe, who conveyed her in her automobile to the Colony Club, where she was entertained at luncheon.
It is Lady Duff Gordon's first visit to America.

Simon Lake, the submarine boat inventor and his wife were also on the Mauretania. Mr. Lake says he is building six large submarines, four for Russia, at St. Petersburg, and two for Austria, at Pola.

SEES FRIEND KILLED AND DROPS INTO SYNCOPE.

Workman in Brass Works Caught in Belt and Whirled About a Shaft.

John Iwanski, nineteen years old, living at No. 116 Avenue D, and employed as a machine runner at the Manhattan Brass Works, at No. 341 East Twenty-eighth street, was caught to-day by a belt he sought to put on a pulley, and was whirled about the shaft and almost instantly killed. Instead of using a pole provided for the purpose Iwanski stood on a chair and started the belt by hand.
His arm was caught and before the machinery could be stopped Iwanski had made two score revolutions in the narrow space between the shafting and the ceiling. Dr. Ruschli, of Bellevue Hospital, said death had come quickly.
There was no arrest.

Angelo Bongolo, twenty-five years old, of No. 56 Grove street, a fellow workman with Iwanski on the second floor of the factory, was one of the witnesses of the accident. He heard the screams of the victim and stood transfixed as he was whirled about the shaft and taken down mangled and bleeding. Later he fell over in a faint and Dr. Ruschli was unable to revive him. He was taken to Bellevue in a state of syncope, his condition being serious.

WOMAN FALLS FIVE FLOORS INTO YARD

Half the Bones in Mrs. Correl's Body Broken in Plunge from Fire Escape.

An ambulance from Bellevue Hospital removed Mrs. Mary Correl from the yard of the tenement, No. 491 East Twenty-ninth street, this afternoon.
Half the bones in her body were broken, and flesh was torn in shreds from her sides. She fell from the fire escape of her apartment on the fifth floor.

Mrs. Correl was forty-eight years old. Her three children were at school and she was putting the finishing touches to the ante-holiday cleaning.
She stepped to the fire escape platform to shake some rugs and missed her footing.

She was in a dying condition when she reached the hospital. Her husband is a carpenter.

MOE LEVY & CO.'S STORE CUT IN HALF FOR SUBWAY LOOP.

The city will take half of the New York Walker street store of Moe Levy & Co. at 119-125 Walker street (just east of Centre street) for the new subway loop which comes up Centre street from "the bridge" and turns into Walker street going east. For months the engineers have been figuring how they could tunnel under the west end of the building without disturbance to the store. They have finally decided that they must have the entire northwest corner of Centre and Walker streets, which takes in half of the store building of Moe Levy & Co. since we several others. This means a loss of over 3,000 square feet of floor space.
Because the firm must figure on an entire reconstruction of the building, they must close out their stocks at once.
They have therefore been forced into a special sale.

That is why you find us making this tremendous price cut of 25 per cent. off our already "one-third lower than the lowest" prices.
Since this sale has started we have introduced our smart custom-quality clothes to thousands of new patrons. For this reason, although this forced sale is a great loss to us in dollars and cents, the new wide distribution of our clothes will be the best advertisement we could use. It will prove our many claims for clothes superiority. Note the prices and come and see the clothes.
